ADHD: The latest findings on evaluation and treatment

The volume of research and new information on ADHD can, at times, be overwhelming. This presentation will examine current research and thinking on ADHD and discuss the implications of these findings for understanding ADHD and working with those diagnosed with ADHD. Particular emphasis will be placed on new treatment approaches and strategies for working with children and adolescents with ADHD. The latest research on medication and non-medication based treatments will be examined. The implications of this research for addressing both behavioral and academic difficulties related to ADHD will be discussed.

Speaker:

Peter Perrotta, PhD

Dr. Perrotta is the President of Centers for Family Change. He has specialized in the evaluation and treatment of ADHD for over 20 years.
